

The work builds on a fascination with a petrol station on the A167 which the artist filmed in 2001 whilst completing an artist's residency in Durham. The work is also inspired by the final scene from Jacques Demy's film The Umbrella's of Cherbourg, a meeting at a petrol station heavy with regret and charged with the remains of a love that has been lost.

Originally commissioned by Durham Art Gallery with funds from Arts Council England.